CU-Denver and Health Sciences Center Downtown to Host Workshop on Women's Use of Violence

"Domestic violence is not the same as battering. The use of domestic violence as an institutional category has led to equating a man's use of physical and sexual violence to dominate his partner with a women's use of physical violence to resist that domination."

- Ellen Pence, 2005

Denver (May12,2005) - On May 12, 2005 at the University of Colorado at Denver and Health Sciences Center Downtown Campus, activist, organizer and author Ellen Pence will present a half-day seminar titled Women's Violence, Women's Resistance. This presentation will explore the phenomena of women's use of violence, how it is understood, some of the unintended consequences of past organizing strategies used by the battered women's movement and what now can be done to create change.

Ellen Pence, Ph.D. has been an activist in the battered women's movement since 1975. In 1980 she was one of a small group of people who organized the Domestic Abuse Intervention Project in Duluth Minnesota. She co-wrote with her colleague Michael Paymar; Tactics of Control and Educational Curriculum for Men who Batter. Today it is the most widely used batterers' rehabilitation model in the country. In the early 1990's, Dr. Pence designed the Safety and Accountability Audit Process used extensively by community teams seeking to enhance their institutional responses to domestic violence. Dr. Pence received her Ph.D. from the University of Toronto in 1996 and has published extensively in the area of domestic violence. She is currently the Director of Praxis International which provides training and technical assistance on analyzing and changing institutional responses to battering.

The Program on Domestic Violence prepares students for leadership roles in organizations that address violence against women and children. The program was initiated by the Graduate School of Public Affairs at CU- Denver in the fall of 2000. It is the first program of its kind in the nation. Students earn a Master of Public Administration degree with a focus on domestic violence, organizational management and policy development. The program also offers training opportunities for the community at large.
